Ode To Goodhue

Dorm of limestone, broad and long
Harken to my humble song.

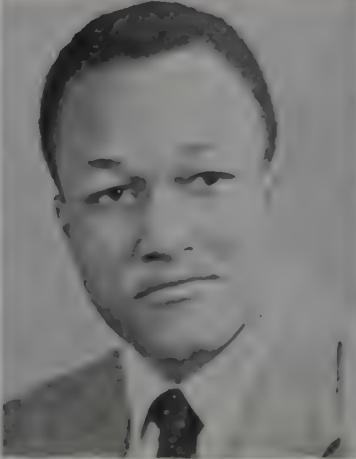

But wait! The "limestone" doesn't click
Keith Covey says it's yellow brick.
Nonetheless I praise these halls
As they resound with loud phone calls.

Though bathrooms here were put in late
Through an architect's mistake
We don't care, 'cause we adore
How they make rivers on the floor.

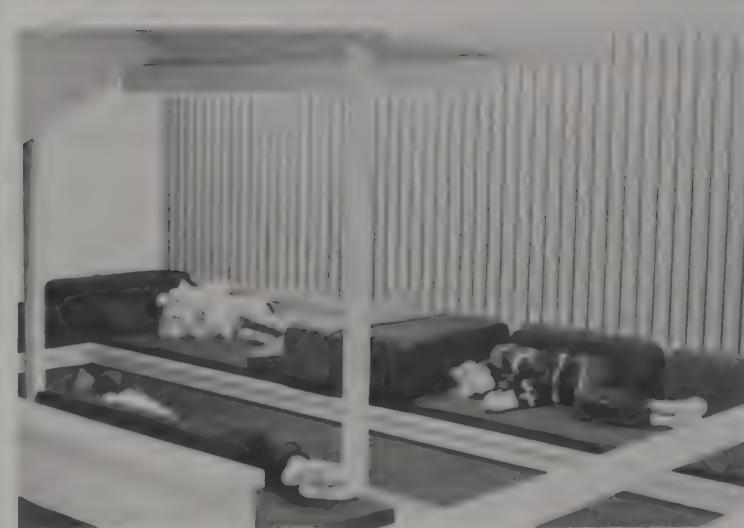

SAGA's here, and we are blessed
With chicken cooked before it's dressed.
No matter if the liver's green
It goes quite well with cold wax beans.

O Goodhue fair! My humble lay
Can never half your charms portray.
Even cockroaches agree
That Goodhue is the place to be.

KAT '84, 308 Goodhue

The Carletonian

April 13, 1984

To whom it may concern:

After a presentation of the proposal by the Central American Solidarity Group, the Carleton chapter of the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group has voted overwhelmingly in favor of the proposed Symposium. As an education-oriented group of students, we of MPIRG strongly support having such a symposium because we feel that it would bring to a focus the issues and facts of the current Central American situation. This is a timely topic which none of us can afford to ignore.

But our support of the CASC Symposium goes beyond merely supporting the idea behind it; we could hardly wish to support just any symposium on the situation at hand, for an unbalanced or otherwise biased symposium would by no means enlighten members of our community. We support the Symposium proposal because we believe that Mr. Wynia and the other organizers and planners of the Symposium will work hard to ensure that speakers represent opposing sides of the issues at hand; that discussion panels will have a make-up such that they too will be representative of opposing viewpoints; that individual members of the audience will have the opportunity to question each speaker regardless of whether a discussion panel has been set up for that particular talk; that students will not be denied entrance to Symposium events.

We encourage all persons with an interest in the future of the Americas to help bring the CASC Symposium to Carleton College.

Sincerely, on behalf of the Carleton chapter of MPIRG,

Jonathan Dings and Barbara Cohen,
Local Board Co-Chairpersons
